VANCOUVER ISLAND

WHALES, WILDERNESS AND WINE

Your short and scenic ferry trip to this island of history and romance may be accompanied by magnificent orcas, playful otters and mischievous gulls. The destination is a rugged, unspoiled part of Canada and the home of a new breed of winemakers. The typical Island winery is a family-based operation, displaying a passion for turning grapes into good times. The inland Cowichan Valley and southeastern Saanich Peninsula provide a variety of conditions perfect for experimentation and the growing and nurturing of an eclectic array of sought-after labels.

Look for varietals including Ortega, Pinot Gris, Maréchal Foch and Pinot Noir.

GULF ISLANDS

A FERRY-TALE ADVENTURE

Their names read like wine labels: Salt Spring, Thetis, Saturna, Quadra, Hornby and so on. British Columbia's Gulf Islands lie in the Strait of Georgia, which separates Vancouver Island from the mainland, connected by a network of small ferries.

The residents reflect a simpler time, when help was as near as a neighbour; likely one with an unopened bottle and corkscrew. This timeless attitude carries over to the unique varietals of the region: wines that appeal more to the palate than to pretence.

This wine-producing region brings traditional values and passion to the shared pleasures of fine wines and good friends.

Look for varietals including Ortega, Zweigelt, Pinot Gris and Pinot Noir.

HERE'S TO THE RURAL LIFE

The Fraser Valley is Vancouver's backyard; a rural paradise stretching for over 150 kilometres from the west coast and one of the world's most spectacular cities. The Valley offers an unforgettable look into a thriving agricultural community.

Over half of the province's agricultural activity is centred here and includes vineyards dedicated to some of the most popular and acclaimed wine labels. In the time since the first Fraser Valley winery opened in 1991, local growers have developed and nurtured a region especially suited to early-ripening varietals.

Look for varietals including Pinot Noir, Bacchus, Pinot Gris, Siegerrebe and Madeleine Angevine.

WHERE THE SUN COMES TO PLAY

The Coastal and Monashee mountain ranges shelter the Okanagan Valley from wet weather and create hot, dry summers. Long daylight hours prolong photosynthesis and late ripening while gentle winds and the magnificent Okanagan Lake moderate winter temperatures. The roads connecting the laid-back cities and towns in the area are so full of pleasant surprises as the wines they bring you to, from vintners who respect tradition without blindly following it. The Okanagan Valley is an ever-changing panorama stretching over 250 kilometres across 11 distinct sub-regions, each with different soil and climate conditions suited to a growing range of varietals.

Look for a wide range of varietals, from Pinot and Chardonnay to Syrah and Zinfandel.

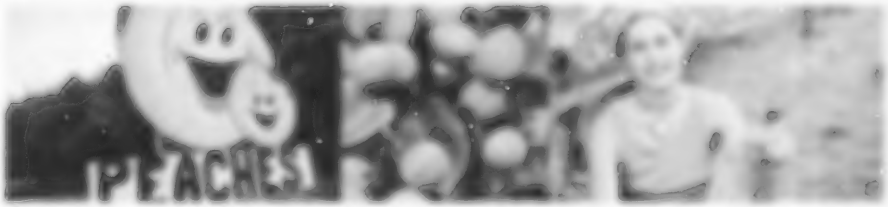
A RIVER RUNS THROUGH IT

The spectacular Similkameen Valley is bordered by steep mountains extending from west of the Okanagan Valley to the United States border. Back in the 1800's, the river running through it gave up gold to eager prospectors. Today, the Valley's treasure is found in fertile land and a climate perfect for the production of wines as fine as any in the world. The Cathedral Mountains hold the daytime heat and temper the coolness that descends with the night. Exceptional varietals are nurtured by rich gravel and silt loam formed from glacial rock.

Look for varietals including Merlot, Gamay Noir, Cabernet Franc and Chardonnay along with some very fine Riesling and Gewürztraminers.



SIP TIPS

LOOK. Tip the glass and take a moment before you smell. As they age, red wines display hints of reddish brown at the edges and whites become more golden, contributing to richer taste.

SMELL. The nose knows. The tongue can only detect five flavours, while the nose can distinguish among thousands. Gently swirl the wine in its glass to vaporize the alcohol and release the aroma of the wine. What do you smell? Sage, clover, apricot, plum or blueberries?

TASTE. The tip of the tongue senses sweetness, the back, bitterness, and the sides detect acidity. Take a small amount of the wine in your mouth and swirl it around to taste the complexity of its character. Are you still tasting it ten seconds later? Did the taste change?

FEEL. This is the mouth of the wine on your tongue. Is it rich, full, lean or bubbly? Does it tingle at the edges? Tannins, for example, feel dry on the tongue, like thick tea or biting into a grape seed.

EAT. The more you eat, the more you can sip and sample. And it's the perfectly proper thing to do. It's also appropriate to pour the rest of the glass into the bucket the winery provides.

CLEANSE. A couple of crackers or a glass of water will cleanse the palate and clear the way for your next experience.

KEEP A LOOKOUT FOR THE FOUR AROMAS AND FLAVOURS OF BC WINES

TRIP TIPS

CAREFUL. Wine and smoking pot don't go together. All that tasting can add up to trouble. If your hand is holding the glass, make sure a designated driver is holding the wheel.

[illegible] and sample as many wines as you like. [illegible] in the wine you like [illegible]

EAT. Many wineries have a restaurant. Take advantage of it and enjoy a sensational lunch. If you've opted for a [illegible] yourself some tasting time. Lighter lunch fare goes great with a variety of wine and enjoying the view.

LEGEND

BRITISH COLUMBIA WINE INSTITUTE MEMBER

01 BY APPOINTMENT ONLY

Wineries may close seasonally and tasting hours may vary: it is best to confirm operating hours to avoid disappointment.

Two great rewards in life are the sharing of a bottle of fine wine and the discovery of new sights along an open road. Each is a pleasure unto its own. Please don't drink and drive.
